

No. 22-15827

IN THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

FELLOWSHIP OF CHRISTIAN ATHLETES, ET AL.,
Plaintiffs-Appellants,

v.

SAN JOSÉ UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT BOARD OF EDUCATION, ET AL.,
Defendants-Appellees,

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, No. 20-CV-2798
Honorable Haywood S. Gilliam, Jr.

BRIEF OF THE ROBERTSON CENTER FOR CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AS
AMICUS CURIAE ON REHEARING EN BANC
IN SUPPORT OF APPELLANTS

Bradley J. Lingo
J. Alex Touchet
Robertson Center for Constitutional Law
REGENT UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF LAW
1000 Regent University
Dr., Ste. 303
Virginia Beach, VA 23464

Michael G. Schietzelt, Jr.
Counsel of Record
1625 Upper Park Road
Wake Forest, NC 27587
Tel. 336-260-7271

CORPORATE DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

The Robertson Center for Constitutional Law is an academic center within Regent University School of Law, which has no parent corporation and issues no stock. Accordingly, no publicly held corporation owns ten percent or more of its stock.

s/ Michael G. Schietzelt, Jr.
Michael G. Schietzelt, Jr.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTEREST OF AMICUS	1
INTRODUCTION	1
ARGUMENT	3
I. The Equal Access Act Forbids Content-Based Regulations On Student Organizations’ Speech	3
II. San José Unified School District Excluded FCA Because Of The Content Of Its Speech	10
CONCLUSION	16

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Page(s)Cases

Bd. of Educ. v. Mergens , 496 U.S. 226 (1990)	passim
Christian Legal Soc’y v. Martinez , 561 U.S. 661 (2010)	7, 12
Cincinnati v. Discovery Network, Inc. , 507 U.S. 410 (1993)	7
Clark v. Cmty. for Creative Non-Violence , 468 U.S. 288 (1984)	6, 9
Fellowship of Christian Athletes v. San José Unified Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ. , 46 F.4th 1075 (9th Cir. 2022)	8, 15
Fellowship of Christian Athletes v. San José Unified Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ. , No. 20-CV-02798-HSG, 2022 WL 1786574 (N.D. Cal. June 1, 2022) ...	9
Garnett by & through Smith v. Renton Sch. Dist. No. 403 , 987 F.2d 641 (9th Cir. 1993)	10, 14
Gays & Straights for Equality (SAGE) v. Osseo Area Schs. , 471 F.3d 908 (8th Cir. 2006)	5
Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Church & Sch. v. EEOC , 565 U.S. 171 (2012)	14
Hsu v. Roslyn Union Free Sch. Dist. No. 3 , 85 F.3d 839 (2d Cir. 1996)	9, 12, 13

InterVarsity Christian Fellowship/USA v. Bd. of Governors of Wayne State Univ. , 534 F. Supp. 3d 785 (E.D. Mich. 2021)	12, 13, 14
Mahanoy Area Sch. Dist. v. B.L. , 141 S. Ct. 2038 (2021)	4
Our Lady of Guadalupe Sch. v. Morrissey-Berru , 140 S. Ct. 2049 (2020)	14
Pendleton Heights Gay-Straight All. v. S. Madison Cmty. Sch. Corp. , No. 1:21-CV-02480-JRS-TAB, 2021 WL 6062961 (S.D. Ind. Dec. 22, 2021)	5
Prince v. Jacoby , 303 F.3d 1074 (9th Cir. 2002)	6
Reed v. Town of Gilbert , 576 U.S. 155 (2015)	7
Rumsfeld v. F. for Acad. & Institutional Rts., Inc. , 547 U.S. 47 (2006)	11
Truth v. Kent Sch. Dist. , 542 F.3d 634 (9th Cir. 2008)	10, 13, 16
Ward v. Rock Against Racism , 491 U.S. 781 (1989)	6
W. Va. State Bd. of Educ. v. Barnette , 319 U.S. 624 (1943)	5

Statutes

20 U.S.C. § 4071	passim
------------------------	---------------

Other Authorities

Brief of Gays & Lesbians for Individual Liberty as Amicus Curiae in Support of Petitioner, Christian Legal Soc’y v. Martinez , 561 U.S. 661 (2010) (No. 08-1371).....	2
Defendants-Appellees’ Answering Brief, Fellowship of Christian Athletes v. San José Unified Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ. , 46 F.4th 1075 (9th Cir. 2022) (No. 22-15827)	7
Joan W. Howarth, Teaching Freedom: Exclusionary Rights of Student Groups , 42 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 889 (2009)	1
Oral Argument, Fellowship of Christian Athletes v. San José Unified Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ. , 46 F.4th 1075 (9th Cir. 2022) (No. 22-15827), https://www.ca9.uscourts.gov/media/audio/?20220809/22-15827/	15
Todd A. DeMitchell & Richard Fossey, Student Speech: School Boards, Gay/Straight Alliances, and the Equal Access Act , 2008 BYU Educ. & L.J. 89.....	5

INTEREST OF AMICUS

The Robertson Center for Constitutional Law is an academic center within the Regent University School of Law. Established in 2020, the Center pairs advocacy and scholarship to advance first principles in constitutional law, including separation of powers, religious liberty, and the rule of law. The Center has represented nationwide religious campus ministries before this Court and has represented members of various faith traditions supporting religious freedom and rights of conscience in the United States Supreme Court and federal courts of appeals.¹

INTRODUCTION

Constitutional and statutory protections secure for minorities and majorities alike the right to hold views, espouse ideas, and form associations around shared values. These protections are “powerful all[ies]” for religious, political, and cultural minorities, allowing them to find their voices “in places where dominant public opinion” weighs against them. Joan W. Howarth, Teaching Freedom: Exclusionary Rights of Student Groups, 42 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 889, 937 (2009). In so doing, these laws guide our polity toward “[a] confident pluralism that conduces to civil peace and advances democratic consensus-building.” See Brief of Gays & Lesbians for Individual Liberty as Amicus Curiae in Support of Petitioner at 35, Christian Legal Soc’y v. Martinez, 561 U.S. 661 (2010) (No. 08-1371).

¹ No party’s counsel authored this brief in whole or in part. No party, party’s counsel, or other person or entity (other than amicus and its counsel) contributed money intended to fund the preparation or submission of this brief. All parties have consented to this filing.

The Equal Access Act of 1984 is one such law, creating vital space in public secondary schools for all manner of student associations. Notably, the Act does not rehash the First Amendment’s limited public forum doctrine. See Bd. of Educ. v. Mergens, 496 U.S. 226, 242 (1990). Instead, it advances First Amendment values through a distinct analytical framework that expands the rights of campus groups. The Act thus ensures equal access to a school’s limited open forum for all student groups—whether they advocate Marx, Mises, Buddhism, or board games.

As its name suggests, Fellowship of Christian Athletes (FCA) is an association formed for student athletes who follow the Christian faith. Their meetings and their membership are open to all students. But students who desire to assume leadership roles within the organization must affirm FCA’s Statement of Faith. Because of this requirement, the San José Unified School District excluded FCA from its Associated Student Body program. FCA brought this action, seeking relief under the Equal Access Act and the First Amendment.

In denying that relief, the lower court misapplied the Act's framework, collapsing a critical and long-recognized distinction in Ninth Circuit precedent between a group's general membership and its leadership. That error led the court to conclude, incorrectly, that the District may exclude FCA from its Associated Student Body program.

The panel on appeal correctly held that FCA had shown a likelihood of success on the merits of its Equal Access Act claim. But FCA's showing was even stronger than the panel indicated. The District admitted that it excluded FCA because of FCA's religious requirements for its leaders. The Equal Access Act and this Court's precedents prohibit such exclusions.

ARGUMENT

I. The Equal Access Act Forbids Content-Based Regulations On Student Organizations' Speech.

Under the Equal Access Act, public secondary schools receiving federal funding and creating a "limited open forum" may not "deny equal access or a fair opportunity to, or discriminate against," student organizations because of the “content of the [organization’s] speech.” 20 U.S.C. § 4071(a). The Act reflects a “broad legislative purpose” to shield students’ associational rights on public high school campuses. See Mergens, 496 U.S. at 239. Aimed specifically at ending “discrimination against religious speech in public schools,” the Act’s protections expand upon those in the First Amendment. See id. (“[A]s the language of the Act indicates, its sponsors contemplated that the Act would do more than merely validate the status quo.”). Thus, the Supreme Court has explained that the Act’s protections should be interpreted broadly. Id.

Though religious discrimination prompted Congress to pass the Equal Access Act, the Act protects all students. As Justice Kennedy explained in his Mergens concurrence, the Act creates space on public high school campuses for student groups with all kinds of offbeat interests and unorthodox beliefs—even those “of a most controversial character.” Id. at 259 (Kennedy, J., concurring). That protected space is most critical when a group’s views challenge conventional wisdom. Mahanoy Area Sch. Dist. v. B.L., 141 S. Ct. 2038, 2046 (2021) (“America’s public schools are the nurseries of democracy. Our representative democracy only works if we protect the ‘marketplace of ideas.’ . . . That protection must include the protection of unpopular ideas, for popular ideas have less need for protection.”); cf. W. Va. State Bd. of Educ. v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624, 642 (1943) (“[F]reedom to differ is not limited to things that do not matter much. . . . The test of its substance is the right to differ as to things that touch the heart of the existing order.”). The Act has long protected the rights of disfavored groups—including sexual minorities—to associate on equal terms with other student organizations. See, e.g., Gays & Straights for Equality (SAGE) v. Osseo Area Schs., 471 F.3d 908, 913 (8th Cir. 2006) (affirming a preliminary injunction because SAGE was denied equal access to benefits afforded other student organizations); Pendleton Heights Gay-Straight All. v. S. Madison Cmty. Sch. Corp., No. 1:21-CV-02480-JRS-TAB, 2021 WL 6062961, at *2–3 (S.D. Ind. Dec. 22, 2021); see generally Todd A. DeMitchell & Richard Fossey, Student Speech: School Boards, Gay/Straight Alliances, and the Equal Access Act, 2008 BYU Educ. & L.J. 89, 98–111 (collecting additional examples).

The Act establishes a distinct analytical framework. A public secondary school receiving federal funds violates the Act if it (1) establishes a “limited open forum” and (2) excludes a student group from that forum (3) because of the content of the group’s speech. 20 U.S.C. § 4071(a). The Act’s definition of “limited open forum” is one example of the significant distinctions between the Act’s framework and the First Amendment. See Mergens, 496 U.S. at 242; see also 20 U.S.C. § 4071(b) (emphasis added) (“A public secondary school has a limited open forum whenever such school grants an offering to or opportunity for one or more noncurriculum related student groups to meet on school premises during noninstructional time.”).

At a minimum, this means that the school’s basis for excluding the student group must be content-neutral. See Prince v. Jacoby, 303 F.3d 1074, 1087 (9th Cir. 2002). “Government regulation of expressive activity is content neutral so long as it is ‘justified without reference to the content of the regulated speech.’” Ward v. Rock Against Racism, 491 U.S. 781, 791 (1989) (quoting Clark v. Cmty. for Creative Non-Violence, 468 U.S. 288, 293 (1984)).

Specifically, under the Act, the relevant inquiry is whether the “content of the [organization’s] speech” forms “the basis” of the school’s decision to exclude the organization from the forum. 20 U.S.C. § 4071(a). So, while the First Amendment’s limited public forum doctrine requires only that “access barriers” be “viewpoint neutral,” Christian Legal Soc’y v. Martinez, 561 U.S. 661, 690 (2010) (emphasis added), the Act requires that exclusions be based on something other than content. The Act does not permit exclusions simply because the school demonstrates its “benign motive” or “lack of ‘animus toward’ ” the organization’s viewpoint. See Reed v. Town of Gilbert, 576 U.S. 155, 165 (2015) (quoting Cincinnati v. Discovery Network, Inc., 507 U.S. 410, 429 (1993)).

The District erroneously argued that a “distinction between nondiscrimination requirements for membership and those for certain leadership positions does not survive Martinez, which confirmed the validity of content-neutral nondiscrimination rules for both membership and leadership.” Defendants-Appellees’ Answering Brief at 32, Fellowship of Christian Athletes v. San José Unified Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., 46 F.4th 1075 (9th Cir. 2022) (No. 22-15827) (citation omitted). Martinez assessed the constitutionality of a university’s nondiscrimination policy. 561 U.S. at 669–70. The Equal Access Act, which applies only to “public secondary schools,” does not purport to regulate university policies. 20 U.S.C. § 4071(a). Accordingly, Martinez did not address—and never mentioned—the Equal Access Act. And it certainly did not suggest that an all-comers policy would comport with the Act.

The upshot is that a school may apply a policy that complies with the First Amendment in a way that violates the Equal Access Act. A neutral and generally applicable policy can violate the Act even without selective enforcement. That is, selective enforcement is sufficient, but not necessary, for an Equal Access Act violation. And a violation of the Act does not trigger balancing tests—like strict scrutiny—that otherwise would apply under the First Amendment. This means that while FCA’s Equal Access Act claim certainly “rises” with a showing of selective enforcement, it does not “fall[]” without one. Cf. Fellowship of Christian Athletes, 46 F.4th at 1098 n.10.

A facially neutral policy adopted for neutral reasons and enforced in a neutral manner nevertheless may run afoul of the Act if applied to exclude a club because of the content of the club’s speech.² The Act does not provide a lower bar for facially neutral policies that incidentally burden speech. See, e.g., Clark v. Cmty. for Creative Non-Violence, 468 U.S. 288, 293 (1984) (describing the analytical framework for incidental burdens on speech under the First Amendment). Schools may not escape the Act’s requirements just because they apply facially neutral rules like nondiscrimination policies in a neutral way. A narrow focus on “the even application of [a] nondiscrimination rule misses the point.” Hsu v. Roslyn Union Free Sch. Dist. No. 3, 85 F.3d 839, 860 (2d Cir. 1996) (“The Act mandates that students be given ‘equal access,’ not that [a s]chool’s internal rules be administered uniformly.”). Indeed, the Act occasionally requires a school to grant “exemptions from neutrally applicable rules that impede one or another club from expressing the beliefs that it was formed to express.” Id.

² As the record in this case shows, the District’s policy was not enforced neutrally. The panel and the district court noted how several groups are allowed to restrict leadership and membership. See Fellowship of Christian Athletes, 46 F.4th at 1095 (noting that the Senior Women’s Club restricts its membership to “seniors who identify as female”); Fellowship of Christian Athletes v. San José Unified Sch. Dist.

These protections go beyond those offered by the First Amendment standing alone. School officials possess significant discretion to determine what is proper within a school. But “comprehensive regulation by federal law” limits that discretion in public secondary schools receiving federal funds. Mergens, 496 U.S. at 259 (Kennedy, J., concurring). School officials may not rely on nondiscrimination policies or other “legal prohibition[s]” to “strategically evade the Act.” Garnett by & through Smith v. Renton Sch. Dist. No. 403, 987 F.2d 641, 645–46 (9th Cir. 1993) (holding that the Equal Access Act preempts conflicting state constitutional law, even if that state constitution is “more protective of individual rights than the federal Constitution”). If they wish to avoid their obligations under the Equal Access Act, school officials must “either reject federal funding or close the school’s limited open forum.” Id. at 646.

Bd. of Educ., No. 20-CV-02798-HSG, 2022 WL 1786574, at *10 (N.D. Cal. June 1, 2022) (recognizing that “the National Honor Society requires members to have a minimum GPA and can disqualify applicants who are ‘unworthy citizen[s].’”), rev’d, 46 F.4th 1075 (9th Cir. 2022), reh’g en banc granted, opinion vacated No. 22-15827, 2023 WL 248320 (9th Cir. Jan. 18, 2023).

II. San José Unified School District Excluded FCA Because Of The Content Of Its Speech.

The District Court denied FCA’s request for a preliminary injunction, concluding that FCA was unlikely to prevail on its claim under the Act. In reaching this conclusion, the court misapprehended Truth v. Kent School District, 542 F.3d 634 (9th Cir. 2008).

In Truth, a group of students who wished to form a Bible club (“Truth”) submitted a charter to the Associated Student Body Council at their school. Id. at 637. That charter restricted membership in Truth to Christian students. Id. at 639. The Associated Student Body Council rejected Truth's charter. Id. Following this rejection, Truth sued for recognition.

The school district advanced three reasons for excluding Truth from its limited open forum: "1) the general membership restrictions, 2) the leadership and voting membership restrictions, and 3) the name 'Truth.'" Id. at 644. The court looked only at the first of these justifications. Id. Concluding that the district's nondiscrimination policy was content neutral as applied to Truth's general membership requirements, the Court held that Truth's exclusion was consistent with the Equal Access Act. Id. at 647 (emphasis added) ("[T]o the extent they proscribe Truth's discriminatory general membership restrictions, the policies do not implicate any rights that Truth might enjoy under the Act.").

Truth's narrow focus on general membership requirements is crucial. The panel in that case explained that general membership requirements are not as likely to require a group to speak or refrain from speaking. See id. (citing Rumsfeld v. F. for Acad. & Institutional Rts., Inc., 547 U.S. 47, 60 (2006)).

By contrast, restrictions on leadership requirements can profoundly impact a group's speech. To maintain the integrity of its message, a group must retain control over its messengers. Martinez, 561 U.S. at 680 (2010) (“[W]ho speaks on [a group's] behalf . . . colors what concept is conveyed.”); Hsu, 85 F.3d at 856 (“[T]he principle of ‘speaker’s autonomy’ gives a speaker the right, in some circumstances, to prevent certain groups from contributing to the speaker’s speech, if the groups’ contribution would alter the speaker’s message.”). Leadership selection “is essential to the expressive content of [a group's] meetings and to the group’s preservation of its purpose and identity.” Hsu, 85 F.3d at 848; see also InterVarsity Christian Fellowship/USA v. Bd. of Governors of Wayne State Univ., 534 F. Supp. 3d 785, 822 (E.D. Mich. 2021), recons. denied, 542 F. Supp. 3d 621 (E.D. Mich. 2021) (“Preventing groups . . . from selecting leaders who are in ideological agreement with the organization they propose to lead can undermine vital interests of maintaining the group’s character and expressing its beliefs in a coherent and authentic way.”). One might think of it this way: The leadership decides the content of the message that will be conveyed, while the membership is the audience that receives the message.

The Second Circuit has explained that “‘tests’ of an officer’s commitment to the group’s cause allow the group to ensure that its agenda will be advanced at its meetings.” Hsu, 85 F.3d at 860. For this reason, the panel in Truth strongly implied that its analysis would have been different had the student organization applied its restrictions only to leadership positions. See 542 F.3d at 647 (distinguishing between the general membership restrictions at issue in Truth and the leadership restrictions at issue in Hsu); id. at 645 n.1 (noting that, of the three reasons given by the District for excluding Truth, “some” of them were “based on the content of Truth’s speech”). At most, Truth held that when nondiscrimination policies regulate who may join a group, they are content-neutral. But Truth expressly refused to extend this reasoning to policies that regulate who may speak on behalf of a group. As Truth and Hsu make clear, such policies are content based. And content-based discrimination is forbidden.

The Equal Access Act demands at least this much. Otherwise, schools could completely undermine religious speech on campus through nondiscrimination policies, requiring organizations to accept as leaders students who reject the organizations’ beliefs. InterVarsity, 534 F. Supp.

3d at 822 (“If Plaintiffs were forced to accept faithless, non-Christians as faith leaders, . . . it is indisputable that the nature of Plaintiffs’ religious group would fundamentally change.”); see also Our Lady of Guadalupe Sch. v. Morrissey-Berru, 140 S. Ct. 2049, 2060 (2020) (explaining that “the selection of the individuals who play certain key roles” within a religious institution is “essential to the institution’s central mission”); Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Church & Sch. v. EEOC, 565 U.S. 171, 200 (2012) (Alito, J., joined by Kagan, J., concurring) (noting that autonomy over selecting “those who serve in positions of leadership” is “essential to the independence of practically all religious groups”). This outcome is incompatible with Congress’s aim of alleviating discrimination against faith-based student groups. See Mergens, 496 U.S. at 239. The Equal Access Act itself is a federal nondiscrimination policy. Local school officials cannot supplant that policy with their own judgments about nondiscrimination. Garnett, 987 F.2d at 646.

In this case, the lower court collapsed the distinction between membership and leadership. It misinterpreted Truth and incorrectly concluded that the District’s policy does not regulate speech based on its content. The District agrees that “student leaders” are expected to “communicate the message of the club” and are “important . . . for setting its direction.” ER 906–07. Yet district officials excluded FCA solely because its student leaders must affirm a Statement of Faith that the district found objectionable under its policies. Indeed, the District’s Rule 30(b)(6) witness affirmed that “exclusion based on religious beliefs” was “the heart of the problem” with FCA’s leadership application. ER 1778. That is precisely the type of exclusion Truth described as being “based on the content of” an organization’s speech.³

This case is straightforward. The Equal Access Act reflects “a broad legislative purpose” to eliminate schools’ restrictions on student organizations’ speech. See Mergens, 496 U.S. at 239. Its protections must receive “[a] broad reading.” Id.

³ Although district officials excluded FCA based on its religious belief requirement for leadership, the District conceded at oral argument in this appeal that even “a White nationalist group would not run afoul of the School District’s All-Comers Policy or its Non-Discrimination Policy so long as the group signed the affirmation statement and club application form stating that anyone could join the group.” Fellowship of Christian Athletes, 46 F.4th at 1095 n.7; Oral Argument at 31:13, Fellowship of Christian Athletes v. San José Unified Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., 46 F.4th 1075 (9th Cir. 2022) (No. 22-15827), <https://www.ca9.uscourts.gov/media/audio/?20220809/22-15827/>.

Only FCA's leadership requirements are at issue. Its meetings and membership are open to all students. The district court failed to appreciate the importance of the distinction between leadership and membership. As a result, the district court improperly narrowed the Act's protections. That decision threatens to erode protections for all student groups. While allowing students with opposing views to join a club or attend its meetings may not change the club's speech, see Truth, 542 F.3d at 647, allowing those same students to lead the club unavoidably would.

By excluding FCA from its Associated Student Body program because of FCA's leadership requirements, the District has denied FCA equal access to a limited open forum based on the religious content of FCA's speech. That is a violation of the Equal Access Act, and it should be enjoined.

CONCLUSION

To preserve the rights of all marginalized groups, amicus asks this Court to effectuate Congress's express purpose of protecting religious student clubs.

Date: February 22, 2023

Respectfully submitted,

s/ Michael G. Schietzelt, Jr.

Michael G. Schietzelt, Jr.

1625 Upper Park Road

Wake Forest, NC 27587

Tel. 336-260-7271

CERTIFICATE OF COMPLIANCE

I hereby certify that the foregoing amicus brief complies with the type-volume limit of 9th Cir. R. 29-2(c)(3), 9th Cir. R. 27-1(1)(d), and 9th Cir. R. 32-3(2), because it contains 3,194 words, excluding the parts of the document exempted by Fed. R. App. P. 32(f), as calculated by the word-processing system used to prepare this brief. I certify that the brief complies with the typeface requirements of Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(5) and the type-style requirements of Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(6) because it has been prepared in a proportionally spaced typeface using Microsoft Word 365 in 14-point Century Schoolbook font.

s/ Michael G. Schietzelt, Jr.
Michael G. Schietzelt, Jr.

Date: February 22, 2023

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that I electronically filed the foregoing with the Clerk of the Court for the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit by using the appellate CM/ECF system on February 22, 2023. I certify that all participants in the case who are registered CM/ECF users will be served by the appellate CM/ECF system.

s/ Michael G. Schietzelt, Jr.
Michael G. Schietzelt, Jr.